

Collision Damage Waiver (CDW)

By accepting the CDW with your signature or initials on the rental document - at the additional daily rate, for each full or partial day that the van is rented to you and the van is operated in accordance with the Agreement - we assume responsibility less the deductible ($500) for the loss of or damage to the van except, if permitted by law, for lost, damaged or stolen keys or remote entry devices, towing or tire services, unless related to an accident, or recovery of the van if stolen and except for your amount of "responsibility", if any, specified on the rental document.

If you do not accept CDW, you owe for all loss or damage to the van. You acknowledge you have been advised that your own insurance may cover loss or damage to the van. You also acknowledge reading the notice on loss damage shown on the rental document, or in these Terms and Conditions, or in a separate notice form.

California, Iowa, Indiana, Louisiana, Hawaii, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New York, Nevada, Rhode Island and Texas, Consumer Protection: Under the laws of these states, a personal automobile insurance policy MUST cover the rental of this motor vehicle against damage to the vehicle and against loss of use of the vehicle. Therefore, purchase of any loss damage waiver or insurance for the risk of possible loss or damage to the van covered by the Agreement is NOT necessary if your policy was issued in one of these states. You should check your personal automobile insurance policy to review if the purchase of CDW would be duplication of coverage afforded under your personal automobile insurance policy.
